

I support RM-10352 as it brings the 160m band into similar alignment as the other bands. The nature of 160m is such that having sub-bands is critical to allowing weak signal communications, including data, to exist in a manner that will allow continued experimentation and development.

It will also reduce interference and reduce the need for FCC resources to be used in dispute resolution.

Thank you for your consideration of my comments.